

YUMMY MUMMY TUMMY

EMAIL

Written by Candice Pendergast
17.02.2008

Forget morning sickness, backache, swelling moodiness and the rest of the common pregnancy complaints. We all know the real problem that faces every woman during pregnancy.

What to wear.

Being 20 weeks pregnant I have to admit to calling my three-year-old into my bedroom to help me out when I have been a little too optimistic and tried to get into some of my old faves. That's where the La Belly Band from SunRos can really come in handy.

Made from comfortable, skin-friendly fabrics, La Belly Band is designed to fit around your waist and over your bump, however big or small, and can be used to cover undone buttons, elastic maternity waistbands or make up that extra space where your favourite shirt just won't reach. They also come in a huge range of colours and designs and even fun and cheeky motifs for every pregnant mum.

La Belly Band is available from SunRos, with sizes ranging from 8 to 18. Prices start at $29.95 for a plain band or $39.95 for one with attitude, plus postage. And while you're there check out their waterproof storage pouch, perfect for the beach this summer (pictured below)!

